AREA OVERVIEW

HIGHLAND PARK

Highland Park is a historic neighborhood in Northeast Los Angeles, with easy access to DTLA, Pasadena, and Glendale.

Of all the neighborhoods in Northeast L.A. —if not the entire city— none have changed as rapidly as Highland Park. The area started in the 20th century as an artsy enclave filled with handsome Craftsman homes and ended the century as a community beleaguered with gang activity. Today, lifelong citizens and gentrifiers have turned Highland Park into a pleasant place where old-school taquerias and hip new bistros coexist.

Highland Park sits a few miles up the 110 from Downtown L.A., just south of Eagle Rock and Pasadena. Its tree-lined residential streets mix with a walkable urban culture, particularly along the burgeoning York Boulevard, a street stocked with trendy gastropubs and art galleries. More recently, Figueroa Street has found itself as another source of increasing pedestrian activity, thanks to its Metro Gold Line stop and a burst of nightlife development.

Highland Park continues to receive local and national attention as a vibrant and rapidly developing neighborhood, attracting professional and creative people from all over Los Angeles.

This community has long been perceived by investors as a solid rental market due to its direct proximity to Glendale to the west, Pasadena to the east, and Downtown Los Angeles just a few minutes to the south.

If New York City’s Brooklyn neighborhoods were bathed in sunshine, they might find their west coast counterpart in Los Angeles’ Highland Park.

Historic homes combine with corridors replete with modern amenities and cozy bookshops tucked-away in secret corners. Despite its analog attitude, Highland Park’s evolution continues as it’s propelled by another moving accoutrement—the Metro Rail Gold Line easily connects commuters to the rest of the city.

METRO GOLD LINE

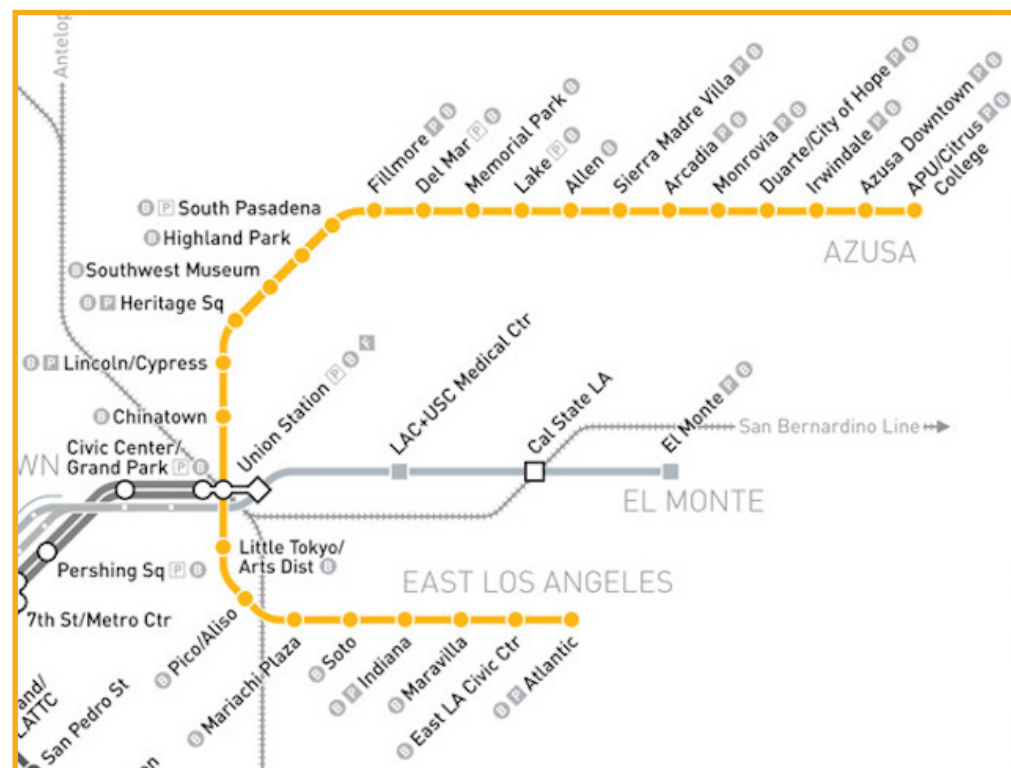

Highland Park's Figueroa Street has become increasingly popular after the arrival of the Highland Park Metro Gold Line. The Gold line provides convenient access from Azusa through Pasadena, to Downtown Los Angeles and on to East LA. Figueroa Street is home to legendary venues like Highland Park Bowl, Highland Park Theatre, Masonic Temple, etc. There are endless options within walking distance. The area provides a certain level of affordability that allows millennials to purchase or rent. Several large development projects are expected to hit the area in the new few years.

NEIGHBORHOOD HIGHLIGHTS

- Highland Theater
- Highland Park Bowl
- Metro Gold Line
- A plethora of restaurants, hip boutiques, nightlife, and coffee shops

“Close proximity to the 110 Freeway as well as walking distance to the Highland Park Station on the Metro Gold Line giving tenants an easy commute throughout Los Angeles
